TV Q&A

Q. Last season, a 60 Minutes segment mentioned a legal suit aimed at preventing the sale of video recorders. How did this turn out?

A. In a case brought by MCA Inc., parent company of Universal Studios, and Walt Disney Productions against Sony and others, the Los Angeles district court ruled: "Noncommercial home-use recording of material broadcast over public airwaves does not constitute copyright infringement." That means it's legal to tape shows off the air for your own use, and the sale of recorders is also legal. MCA and Disney are appealing the decision.

Q. Does that mean it's legal to tape programs from pay-TV for my home library?

A. That's still a hazy area. The judge said his ruling in the MCA-Sony case didn't apply to pay-TV, cable TV, tape-swapping or home duplication of tapes because these practices weren't involved.

Q. What causes color streaks and fringes on the screen during a black-and-white movie, and how can I prevent it?

A. It could be a slight misalignment of your set, an antenna problem or a goof at the station. In any event, it's easy to prevent—just turn the color control all the way down. But don't forget to turn it up again when Charlie's Angels comes on.

Q. I recently received station WDSU-TV from New Orleans on my TV set in Glen Head, N.Y. What made this possible?

A. An atmospheric disturbance known as "sporadic-E" (which frequently accompanies sunspots) causes a portion of the ionosphere to reflect radio waves, "bouncing" them for long distances. Under this condition, reception of TV stations even across oceans isn't unusual.

Q. Does it save electricity to disconnect an "instant-on" set between uses?

A. Most instant-on sets consume five to seven watts when not in use. Unplugging such a set or using the "master off" switch should save two to five dollars a year in energy, depending on type of set, how much you watch and the cost of electricity. But the instant-on feature might save far more in repairs if it's used, because it can prevent thermal shock to the tube and keep moisture from building up in some components. Instant-on has been discontinued since the energy crisis, probably more as a public-relations gesture than a significant power saving.

Q. How can I prevent two stations on the same channel in different cities from clashing on my TV set?

A. Get a highly directional antenna and have it aimed at the station you want to receive. If you want to watch both at different times, add an antenna rotator. Or move.

WILL NBC BE PROUD AS A PEACOCK BY APRIL?

Early returns are mixed as the network struggles to rise from last place in the ratings race

By Sally Bedell

When the Washington Redskins were stuck in a deep slump back in 1971, a hard-driving coach named George Allen rolled into town to lead them back to victory. Instead of rebuilding with youth, Allen invested heavily in a roster of aging veterans. Skeptical sportswriters christened them the "Over the Hill Gang" and awaited certain disaster. But surprise of surprises, just two seasons later they had charged their way into that ultimate football contest, the Super Bowl.

Another seasoned coach of sorts named Fred Silverman confronted a similarly moribund team when he became president of NBC in June 1978. After a brief flirtation with untested talent, he too assembled a roster of veteran broadcasters by reaching back to his glory days as head programmer at CBS and ABC. With an average of 20 years' experience apiece, they were truly the Over the Hill Gang of network television. But could they score the broadcasting equivalent of a Super Bowl victory—first place in the Nielsen ratings?

That question has assumed obsessive proportions at a time when the television-ratings contest has become the newest spectator sport.

The financial stakes are huge. During 1978, top-rated ABC-TV delivered pretax profits of $187 million—$136 million more than NBC, which trailed the leader in prime time by nearly four rating points. NBC must now close that gap to satisfy the stockholders and executives of its parent company, RCA. The personal stakes are equally enormous for Fred Silverman, who has gone on record to predict that NBC will be No. 1 by Christmas 1980. His legendary reputation as a programming wizard has never been more squarely on the line.

While still mired in last place, Silverman has managed to make progress in developing several moderately successful weekly series. But with his upcoming midseason schedule, he needs to build some strong hits.

Silverman's conservative, yard-by-yard offensive this season differs dramatically from his approach in his first year, when he careened from one crisis to another. His meager prime-time inheritance leaned heavily on expensive movies and miniseries that had to be sold anew to the TV audience each week. Silverman left a trail of 23 failed series—including a massively promoted disaster called Supertrain—as he tried to patch the enormous holes in his prime-time schedules. Silverman's binge cost $50 million, an expenditure that pulled down NBC's 1978 profits by 20 per cent. By last April, the network bottomed out with its worst ratings average in more than 10 years.

NBC slipped on other fronts as well. The Nightly News lost two ratings points to ABC's scrappy World News Tonight from May 1978 to the same month in 1979. The venerable Today show faced a stiff challenge from ABC's Good Morning America, which enlarged its share of the breakfast-time audience from 21 to 24 per cent in one year, while Today hovered at 29 per cent. Johnny Carson announced last April that after almost 17 years he wanted to quit as host of The Tonight Show, a money gusher that contributes some 10 per cent to NBC's pretax profits. And the ratings for NBC's daytime and Saturday-morning shows continued to languish in third place.

Add to those considerable woes a major embezzlement scandal among middle-level financial officers and the loss of four longstanding affiliated stations to ABC in nine months. Newspaper headlines reported rumors of feuding between Silverman and his new chairman, ex-IBM executive Jane Cahill Pfeiffer. Hollywood producers took their best ideas to ABC and CBS first to avoid dealing with NBC's chaotic decision making. Silverman, according to some accounts, was driving himself and every one around him crazy by attempting to save NBC singlehandedly —and overnight. As he approached his first anniversary at the network, the situation was bleak indeed. "Had I known what I know now, I probably wouldn't have taken this job," said Silverman at the time.

Silverman's revised game plan called for convulsive changes throughout the company. By autumn, new faces peered across the desks of the vice chairman, the presidents of news, sports, radio and the NBC-TV stations as well as the heads of finance, promotion and personnel. The new vice chairman, Richard Salant, who formerly headed CBS News, helped Pfeiffer supervise the news division as well as such nonprogramming areas as government relations and long-range planning.

Three dozen new programmers—many of them handpicked by Silverman —replaced holdovers that he dismissed, demoted or discouraged. The key running back in this new offensive squad was Perry Lafferty, an experienced television director and crack administrator who had worked under Silverman at CBS when it dominated the ratings in the early '70s.

With trusted allies concentrating on → the scrimmages, Silverman could bore in on the main prime-time contest. He unveiled his new fall schedule to a chorus of titters along New York's Broadcast Row. Of the six new NBC shows, not one was a half-hour situation comedy—the acknowledged linchpin in any popular prime-time lineup. Moreover, Silverman explained that he was retaining five shows—Hello, Larry, BJ and the Bear, Real People, Kate Columbo and Diff'rent Strokes—from his midseason blitz of 15 new shows. The titters turned to guffaws, and industry soothsayers predicted another ratings rout for NBC.

The NBC schedule was actually a blend of necessity and design. First came a sparse harvest of pilot development—the 37 sample shows created last spring for possible inclusion in the fall schedule. Silverman was so disappointed with the 19 comedies he was offered that he stalked out in the middle of one show, a spoof of investigative reporting called Two Guys from Muck. The police-adventure Eischeid originated after Silverman voiced his displeasure with the fall development, prompting a nervous programming executive to spend a frantic three days concocting a series from a 1978 television movie, "To Kill a Cop."

Silverman could ill afford to jettison many of his existing programs—particularly after the storm he had created by dumping all nine of the previous fall's shows. So he searched through what he had and spotted little glints of promise. He took BJ and the Bear, a show so new it still wore its wrapping, and spun one character into The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo.

At the core of NBC's fall offensive were returning shows (The Rockford Files, Quincy) likely to hold a solid if unspectacular audience at 9 o'clock each night. The 8-o'clock shows were aimed at young adults but contained elements and characters that could entice ABC's juvenile audience as well.

Over the summer Silverman spent three weeks supervising the first six episodes of every series—old and new. He and his programmers concocted stunts (Sheriff Lobo meets Jaws), recruited guest stars such as Lauren Bacall, and devised exploitable plot lines. One of his many brainstorms: Snow White and the seven truckers, a BJ and the Bear extravaganza about eight curvaceous rig drivers.

NBC launched its massive promotional assault at the annual affiliates meeting in May by strutting a stylized version of the old NBC peacock. In mid-June—two weeks earlier than usual—the network extended the pitch to its own airwaves. Fully 70 per cent of NBC-TV's promotion time (versus 15 per cent a year earlier) was pressed into service for the fall shows.

Silverman's enthusiasm infected his programming staff as well. Producers sensed it, and they began giving NBC more first cracks at program ideas. Said Jerry Katzman, head of the television department at the William Morris Agency in Hollywood, "The NBC people out here can now make decisions. I get the feeling they know what the business is all about."

Nobody knows more about the risks and rewards of that business than Fred Silverman. Throughout his first year, he was able to deflect much of the blame for NBC's problems to the people and programs he inherited. This year, as NBC-TV president Robert Mulholland announced to the advertising community, "This is a Silverman schedule—his programs, his scheduling and his promotion." Living with that responsibility initially made Silverman more cautious. But as the new season approached, he began warming to the challenge. "I can't wait for our schedule to go on the air. I really can't," he said in late July. Impatiently, he paced the sidelines, waiting for the game to begin.

Next week: NBC's game plan is tested.

Welcome to the brain

Your tour guide is scientist Carl Sagan

Cosmos, a 13-part science series coming up next season, deals mostly with astronomy and space exploration. Then why is Carl Sagan, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author, scientist and host of Cosmos, walking around inside a model of the human brain (opposite)? Because without that wondrous organ, not even he could make heads or tales of the universe. The brain is a kind of minigalaxy—"a big place in a very small space," says Sagan—with enough information to fill some 20 million books. To re-create the brain's forest-like neural network, model-makers Tom Pahk (above left) and Rick Thompson (center) made molds from rooty things—radishes, carrots, turnips —then wired them all together into television's most creative network (below). But threading his way through that jungle would turn even Carl Sagan into a bundle of nerves. So the effect was created optically—with sophisticated mix-and-match cameras and a process called chroma key. The blue background in the bottom picture, opposite, will disappear, and viewers will see Sagan as in the top shot, discoursing happily on the little gray cells—a man with a mind of his own

Caroline McWilliams can say 'no' in three syllables

At the drop of a cue, the 'Benson' star will turn a word into a virtuoso performance

By Ellen Torgerson Shaw

Caroline McWilliams is not your quintessential television actress, being, as she is, better acquainted with Shakespeare, experimental theater and hit plays on Broadway than with the prevailing honky-tonk quality of TV situation comedies.

But Caroline, the blithe and intelligent—if a trifle man-hungry—secretary, Marcy, in ABC's Benson, didn't originally want to be an actress at all. Her girlhood goal, when she gave it any thought, was to be a doctor. Like her father. Now semiretired, Dr. Joseph McWilliams is a heart specialist in Barrington, R.I., where Caroline grew up.

Her father suggested instead (and her mother, Pat, a veteran volunteer in hospitals, concurred): be a nurse. A gentle, serviceable occupation leading properly to marriage and children. Caroline's nascent feminism would not accept this parental fiat, however. Nursing was probably a swell vocation—but not for her. Before it became a problem, Caroline found a solution. Actually it was found for her.

"I was sitting around with a bunch of girl friends in high school, talking about what we'd all be doing. I picked up a movie magazine—it was a joke—and said, 'I'm going to be a movie star'." Raucous laughter. Later, a friend called and told her the local theater company was doing "Oklahoma!"—why didn't the boastful Caroline give it a whirl? Not one to let a challenge die, Caroline did precisely that.

To her stunned surprise, she won a part in the chorus and was asked to understudy Ado Annie. "I loved it. It seemed right," she says.

Determined to go to college and study drama, Caroline sensibly asked her high school drama teacher what she'd recommend. "I was so flaky in those days, I didn't write down what she told me. All I could remember when I got home was Carnegie Tech and Northwestern. I finally chose Carnegie because the thought of all those numbers of people at Northwestern overwhelmed me."

The paradox of the professional performer is apparent in this statement. Under the klieg lights, Caroline can be outrageous, exuberant, exultant—she can play a doxy or a queen. But in person, she is shy, thoughtful to the point of seeming pensive and as private as the Dalai Lama about her life outside the theater.

"I am an incredibly lighthearted person," Caroline insists. But she admits that people often think her haughty and aloof, if not decidedly cool. Her mother, Mrs. McWilliams, agrees: "She was always the bounciest, most vital little girl, not shy at all." Nevertheless, Caroline has not hired the mandatory Hollywood press agent to tell the world at least once a week how marvelously talented, pretty and desirable she is.

Her background does clearly show at least one trait—tenacity. In the merciless, boot-camp atmosphere of Carnegie Institute of Technology [now Carnegie-Mellon University] in Pittsburgh, Caroline was an achiever. "Carnegie threw students into productions right off. It was all very pressured and incredibly intense," Caroline says. She has never studied formally since.

After graduation—and an offer from the prestigious Long Wharf Theater in New Haven, Conn.—Caroline chose to spend the summer in Hollywood, where she served time as an Avon lady, a hostess in a pancake dispensary, a secretary and sundry other pay-the-rent jobs before she was hired for the first play in the brand-new Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles. For a year, she performed every Monday night in the Taper's New Theater For Now.

There was some work in TV, but not much. "I was regularly turned down. One casting director said I didn't have the look anyone would want." She shudders at the memory. "He said I → had a character face and I'd never work, so I might as well get out of the business."

Upward and onward. To New York. Some off-Broadway. Some radio commercials. More hoping and auditioning and despairing. Then came the part of Janet Norris in the supersoap The Guiding Light, in 1969. She remained the woeful Janet for six years. "The only hard thing about it was keeping it fresh," she says. Working on a soap, though, permits an actress to do theater at night if she has energy left. Caroline took over for Elizabeth Ashley in a revival of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," appeared with Hal Linden in "The Rothschilds," and commuted to Stratford, Conn., where she trod the hallowed boards of the American Shakespeare Festival. Happiness for a young actress.

When she finally—in 1975—quit her security soap forever, she twitched for a week. "My eyes blinked all the time. I had just met this wonderful man and I had to explain to him that I didn't ordinarily twitch." Now she appreciates her anxiety attacks. "They let you know how you really feel."

Arriving in Hollywood she contacted an old Carnegie Tech pal, Steve Bochco, then fortuitously the producer of a new series, Richie Brockelman Private Eye. He hauled her in to read for a part in an upcoming episode. It was small, just a couple of lines. But a few days later she received a call from the faithful Bochco. Would she read for the lead in the same episode? She did. And won it. After that, "one wonderful pilot followed another." But none made it to a network broadcast berth. So she played a hooker in Barney Miller and again in Quincy.

Her audition for Soap was a triumph. "It was 15 blondes and me," she says. The part was that of Burt Campbell's (Richard Mulligan) lonely but seductive secretary. Paul Witt, one of Soap's producers and presently the executive producer of Benson (a spinoff of Soap), remembers Caroline. "Anyone who could hold her own against Mulligan has to be great." Caroline so pleased Witt, Susan Harris and Tony Thomas (the other two Soap producers) that they ultimately asked her to play the secretary in Benson. She agreed, although the frothy character of Marcy is a far shriek from Caroline's far more substantial and subduedly feminist personality. "She will challenge ideas or aspects of the character she feels are sexist," Witt says. "But she's not crusading on a white horse."

In days past, Caroline fought publicly against such societal tribulations as air pollution and noise pollution and for women's rights. "I had battles to win. I was very opinionated, not a listener. It never occurred to me that to communicate, one had to listen. Now I pay attention. When you're interested in someone, people open up. I do still feel driven about work. And I do want to move out of television and into feature films."

Her life now, some of her private wars behind her, is downright nice already. She is putting in a swimming pool ("I can't believe I'm doing this") behind her bought-with-her-own-money new house. And . . . "I am madly in love. I don't believe that someone like him really exists." This transcendent being with whom she is sharing "the most equal relationship I've ever been in" is an actor. A good actor. "I was always struck by his talent. Talent is incredibly seductive to me. I don't think I could go with an untalented actor. And he's so funny . . ." Who can this be? Ah, that's an invasion of the private woman. "It doesn't matter. His identity has nothing to do with me." Her identity, she feels, rightfully, is what's important. Then she says, "I am happier than I've ever been in my life. I've worked hard at the molding of me."

With terrific results. END

'Every Four Years'

No President has been a successful leader without first finding ways to deal — and make deals — with Congress

By James MacGregor Burns

[PBS will telecast "Every Four Years" in three weekly installments, beginning Wednesday, Jan. 23. See "Sports and Specials" column in the program section for time and channels.]

All three Democratic candidates—Carter, Kennedy and Brown—have made leadership the central issue of the 1980 Presidential campaign. Almost all the Republican contenders have followed suit. Could any deliver, if elected? It depends on what they mean by leadership.

If the candidates think that leadership means getting up on a white charger, waving a sword and blowing a bugle, any one of them can lead. But if leadership means grasping the real needs and aspirations of the American people and making our vast, fragmented system of government serve those needs and aspirations, then the odds are against most of these candidates.

I say this on the basis of history. Since the start of our Government in 1789, the nub of the problem of Presidential leadership has been Congress —as Jimmy Carter most recently has discovered. All the "strong" Presidents have had to invent ways of putting across their legislative programs.

Thomas Jefferson, facing opposition from Rep. John Randolph, the head of an already potent Ways and Means Committee, eased young Randolph out of the chairmanship. A few years later Jefferson's nephew took up residence in Randolph's district, ran against him, and defeated him. Other congressmen took note.

Lyndon Johnson was considered a master at working with congressmen.

Woodrow Wilson at the outset told friends that he would not give patronage jobs to congressmen. Warned that if he did not, they "will hate you and will not vote for anything you want," Wilson started playing the patronage game, and Congress started passing his legislation.

Franklin Roosevelt would do almost anything to get his key measures →

Historian and political scientist James MacGregor Burns has written many books about the American Presidency.

through Congress. Also his key appointments. When a South Carolina senator held up Roosevelt's nomination of Rexford Tugwell for a key post in the Agriculture Department, FDR knew that the senator wanted a United States marshalship for a henchman who was accused of homicide. Exactly what happened is not clear, but one day Roosevelt greeted Tugwell with the blithe remark: "You will never know more about it, I hope—but today I traded you for a couple of murderers!"

Lyndon Johnson was a master at arm-twisting and ego-pleasing. He also understood Congressional timing. "You've got to give it all you can, that first year," he said; during the next three, congressmen were only "worrying about themselves."

Two lessons can be learned from such experiences: Presidential pressure worked for a while. It did not work very long. Why not?

Presidential power has rested mainly on the capacity of chief executives to work with our system and to use their own skill and clout to put their programs over. This is effective for a while, because the President has some political reserves—like jobs—to call on. But these reserves are soon exhausted. Then stalemate develops as the chief executive goes his way and 535 legislators go theirs.

The present Administration is a modern case study in Presidential-Congressional frustration. Jimmy Carter began on a high moral note. He would not play old, Washington-type politics. He had a brief honeymoon with Congress; then the same old troubles began, as bills got lacerated or lost in the labyrinthine channels of Congressional committees and subcommittees.

Missing was a clear and convincing set of goals, an explicit and balanced legislative program, a broad and consistent vision. Also missing was the political skill and electricity necessary to line up Congressional support. "I am not much of a trader," Carter admitted. "That is one of my political defects." Energy legislation became a prime example of lack of clear, continuous, explicit leadership. The President wanted a major effort toward conservation, but the signals were weak or inconsistent, and energy measures were stifled in Congress or emerged in tatters. Crises came along, flurries of action followed, then interest died—until the next crisis.

No wonder our Government has been described as lurching between stalemate and spasm.

What to do? As we approach 1987, the bicentennial of the making of our Constitution, we might—in the spirit of the founding fathers—reassess the strategy that lies back of that charter. That strategy was to fragment Governmental power—between President and Congress, between the House and Senate, between the Federal and state governments—in order to stop government from interfering with people's individual liberties.

Today we often need government to protect our liberty and our welfare. Should we try to knit together what the Framers put asunder? The 1980s, like the 1790s, may call for creative imagination in modernizing our system.

If we prefer not to tamper with our Constitution, the only alternative is strengthening our party system. In the old days, parties provided teamwork in Government, drawing the separated branches of Government together. Today they are steadily declining, as candidates prefer to play the politics of personality, of movie stars and celebrity athletes of television and the kind of money that buys television. Parties both supported and stabilized Presidential power. We should try to revitalize them at every level of government. And the 1980 candidates should be asked to explain—in clear and explicit terms—just how in their administrations they would prevent holy wedlock from turning into holy deadlock. END

PICK YOUR PICK-ME-UP

COFFEE...COLA... OR VIVARIN

If you're like most people, you enjoy a cup of good, hot coffee or an ice cold cola. They taste great, and give you the lift you want.

But if, as the day wears on, you sometimes have coffee or cola just for the lift, you should try Vivarin.

Vivarin is the gentle pick-me-up. The active ingredient that makes Vivarin so effective is the caffeine of two cups of coffee (or about six glasses of cola) squeezed into one easy to take tablet.

Next time you want a lift, pick Vivarin. It's convenient, inexpensive and it really works.

The Screening Room

Previews of noteworthy series and specials by TV GUIDE programming editors. For movie choices, see 'This Week's Movies,' by Judith Crist, in this section.

Highlights of the week: Super Bowl XIV, a standout documentary about a valiant woman and the debut of a docudrama about the century's most notorious lovers.

SATURDAY. Last season The Chisholms followed a dispossessed Virginia farm family trekking west during the 1840s. The series, returning tonight (8 CBS), picks up the sodbusters in Wyoming Territory as they make their torturous way toward a new home and a fresh start in California. The scenic locations make the two-hour opener notably realistic, and there are strong performances by both leads, Rosemary Harris and Robert Preston. . . . Before Maude made her a star, Beatrice Arthur trod the boards of New York stages for 25 years. And she hasn't forgotten a thing, as Arthur displays, on this program (10 CBS), a fine versatility in songs, sketches, production numbers and dramatic vignettes with Rock Hudson, Melba Moore, and Wayland Flowers and Madame.

SUNDAY. Those perennial bridesmaids, the Los Angeles Rams, will finally represent the NFC in Super Bowl XIV (6 CBS). That's the good news. The bad news is that they'll have to try to keep the Pittsburgh Steelers from successfully defending their NFL title. Although the Rams have won seven straight division championships, this is their first appearance in a Super Bowl. For the Steelers, though, it's old hat: they are unbeaten in three previous Super Bowl appearances—and are odds-on favorites to make it four.

MONDAY. Joan Robinson: One Woman's Story (8 PBS) chronicles the last two years in the life of a terminal-cancer patient. As a graphic record of Joan Robinson's trials—both physical and emotional—this documentary pulls no punches. Indeed, some may find it too graphic, especially in its final scenes. But what also emerges is an honest portrayal of a quietly courageous woman with a fierce—and at times desperate—will to live . . . Shirley Jones, Diahann Carroll, Debby Boone and Beatrice Arthur (again) help Bob Hope (9 NBC) take a musical stroll down memory lane, performing tunes associated with the various stages of Hope's career. Among the hits recalled in the hour: "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "Buttons and Bows" and, of course, "Thanks for the Memory" . . Tom Snyder (10 NBC), taking a page from Barbara Walters' book, interviews four celebrities: Clint Eastwood, Barry Manilow, Gary Coleman and Bo Derek, who was last seen romping around in the film "10."

WEDNESDAY. The man who renounces power and empire for love is usually the stuff of romantic fiction, but England's King Edward VIII was just such a man Edward & Mrs. Simpson, a six-part British series bowing tonight (7:30 in most areas, but the time for this independent production will vary in some locations), painstakingly re-creates the events leading up to Edward's 1936 abdication. The opener merits high praise for its handsome sets and period costumes—and the galvanizing performances of Edward Fox and Cynthia Harris.

In some areas network shows may not be seen on the days and times indicated. Times are Eastern.

Michigan Bolsters Public TV's Hopes For Convention News

New York—Public television won't be offering gavel-to-gavel coverage of the national Presidential nominating conventions, as it had hoped to do, but it now appears that it will be able to provide some kind of live convention programming. On Dec. 28, Michigan governor William Milliken signed a state authorization of $340,000 that will enable WTVS, the public-TV station in Detroit (where the Republican convention will be held), to send signals by satellite. The provision, which includes funds for ground links and portable equipment, means that regularly scheduled series such as The MacNeil/ Lehrer Report will be able to broadcast convention-related programming live from Detroit. If independent funding can be raised, it is also possible that WTVS, a consortium or another producer could assemble some limited form of coverage and make it available to all public-TV stations.

Similar possibilities exist for public-TV coverage of the Democratic convention, which will be held in New York City. Jerry Toobin, news director for New York's WNET, says his station will provide some convention programming, though it is only beginning to plan now. WNET televised the recent United Nations Security Council sessions on Afghanistan, and could offer similar coverage of platform hearings.

PBS had sought to provide an in-depth alternative to the networks' convention coverage, but it couldn't clear the financial hurdles. As outlined by Robert MacNeil last summer, the programming would not include floor reporters but, like The MacNeil/Lehrer Report, would focus on interviews and create "what commercial television always fails to do—a wider construct for the politics of the convention." New York's WNET was able to obtain a $2-million funding grant from Mobil for this purpose but it couldn't raise the required matching amount and had to pass on the contribution.

Whether it was because of the transfer of David Brinkley to a commentator's spot, its coverage of the crises in the Middle East or simply the show's pacing, no one knows. But the hard fact is that NBC's Nightly News is again leading ABC's World News Tonight in the Nielsen ratings. NBC, which during the third quarter trailed ABC for the first time ever (by less than .1 of a rating point), posted a 13.5 average rating for the fourth quarter compared with 12.9 for ABC. CBS's Evening News is still in first place with 15.0. NBC News president William Small says he is "pleased" and attributes the gain in part to "aggressive reporting."

Public television's proposed 13-part documentary series about Vietnam has moved closer to realization, thanks to a $1.2 million production grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The $4 million series is tentatively scheduled for the fall of 1981. The project is the largest public-affairs effort public television has attempted, and will feature exclusive interviews and film footage never shown in the U.S.

As We See It

☐ You may recall the case of the enraged actress who dubbed a network executive "The Mad Programmer." Lee Grant's ire had been aroused by what she considered to be a much-too-quick decision to cancel her new series, shortly after its faltering debut. Faltering, at least, in the Nielsen ratings.

It was explained at the time that, with resourceful statisticians and lightning computers, networks could now more quickly detect the weaklings among their offerings, and the economics of television was such that it became mandatory to knock off these low-rated shows with dispatch. Not to do so meant lost revenue in the millions.

☐ Since then, said Grant Tinker in Hollywood the other day (he is chairman of the Caucus for Producers, Writers and Directors, whose members turn out 90 per cent of all prime-time programming), we have developed a "prove-yourself-in-three-weeks mentality" that has been destroying quality programming on TV.

As examples of slow starters that, when allowed enough time, went on to win success, Tinker cited three solid hits: All in the Family, The Dick Van Dyke Show, and his own Mary Tyler Moore Show.

☐ The networks, in their frantic search for quickly established, strong shows, are, in all probability, losing some that might very well have developed into viable, quality series. And, ironically, while this artistic massacre goes on, they step up their pleas to producers for more and more material.

Not only speed of turnover and the constant changing of schedules, but reduction of production time, and plot-interference by a multiplicity of network executives are resulting in a product that, Tinker charges, "is lowering the tastes of audiences."

☐ That's a refreshing thought. Usually producers talk about the low tastes of audiences lowering the quality of television shows.

Thanks John!

there really is a difference

THE RATINGS AND THE HOSTAGES

Your thoughtful editorial on our hostages in Iran ["As We See It," Dec. 22] is a penetrating and much needed critique of TV-network news. There is little doubt that the drive for ratings often takes precedence over the quest for truth, the need for perspective and the requirements of patriotism. Freedom and the rule of law have suffered because TV has been used by terrorists and totalitarians for their own purposes. Doesn't this say something about the U.S. TV coverage of the Olympics in Moscow?

NO HUMBUG FOR HENRY

Though the warmth and charm of earlier Happy Days have dwindled into loud slapstick, Henry Winkler has grown into a sensitive, mature artist ["Is It Fun to Be the Fonz? Aaaay" Dec. 15]. After seeing "An American Christmas Carol" [Dec. 16] with Winkler's beautiful portrayal of age, I doubt if any of us will keep his creativity merely strapped into the Fonz's leather jacket.

NEWS VIEWS

As a news-assignment editor for the NBC affiliate in Amarillo, Texas, I feel I must respond to the David Brinkley interview ["Documentaries: 'Why Bother?' Exposés: 'Overrated'; Foreign News: 'Excessive'," Dec. 15]. It is important that those who read the article realize that, despite his big name and bigger salary, Brinkley does not speak for the news departments of NBC affiliates. Many, like the one I work for, felt revulsion at Brinkley's claim that TV news doesn't really need documentaries or investigative reporting. Sure, Brinkley may be right in saying investigative reporting does not change things. But in a society where people vote for candidates and laws based on available information, it's important that people be as well-informed as possible. We take our responsibility seriously because, as Brinkley admitted, most people get their news from television and many newspapers are of poor quality. If Brinkley wants NBC to ignore documentaries and investigative reporting, that's his opinion. But many NBC-affiliate news departments will tell you that his philosophy has not been, is not and will not be accepted at several local television news departments.

Steve LaPrade
Amarillo, Texas

David Brinkley has achieved his success and amassed his loyal following because of his singular ability to temper the happenings of the day with a generous portion of common sense. He is unique in that he has not succumbed to the delusions of grandeur that are the occupational disease of his profession.

Robert C. Trube III

GETTING BACH

We tend, unfortunately, to deify those whose achievements we respect. By regarding the Johann Sebastian Bachs of the world as essentially different from other mortals, we excuse our own inability to scale their heights. So anything showing us that even the greats are only human, as does Harold Schonberg's lively background article "The Joy of Bach" [Dec. 22], can encourage more of us to aspire to greatness. It is regrettable, however, that the article concludes with such embarrassing nonsense as Bach's having taken music "out of the Middle Ages" (he came 250 years too late to do that) and his having "made it what it is today" (his influence on the musical idiom of the past 250 years has been minimal).

This Week's Movies By Judith Crist

Sunday, ABC	The Adventures of the Wilderness Family
Sunday, NBC	The Courage of Kavik
Sunday, ABC	Fun with Dick and Jane
Tuesday, CBS	Once Upon a Family
Tuesday, NBC	Death Penalty
Friday, ABC	Mother and Daughter: The Loving War
Friday, NBC	Marriage is Alive and Well

The un-macho man of the '80s, heralded for a decade by Woody Allen and more recently by Burt Reynolds, David Steinberg and Dustin Hoffman, has now arrived on television.

In what is a clear case of utter coincidence—or good writers thinking alike—the G.E. Theater film Once Upon a Family emerges as a California version of "Kramer vs. Kramer." Once again we're given a woman who is "drowning" in housewifery and takes off, leaving her husband, a man hitherto absorbed in his own pursuits, to learn to be a parent and housekeeper, to develop insights on human relations and to face finally his wife's return and a child-custody suit in court. Because Alvin Sapinsley's script is California-based, there are two children and a seven-room house as well as a career to care for. But the script also provides a wise grandmother, a new romantic interest in the second year of the wife's desertion, and a different judicial attitude. Most important, there is a fine performance by Barry Bostwick, with excellent support from Nancy Marchand and Marcia Strassman, under Richard Michaels' direction. The result is a completely satisfying drama.

The drama is attenuated in NBC Theater's Death Penalty. Edward Adler's plodding, predictable and dated (set in 1959) story of a "young savage" who kills two other teen-agers, and his "salvation" by a devoted psychologist. To his credit, David Labiosa makes the youth's barely credible transition from near-animal to cogent individual fascinating, and ethnic issues are dealt with frankly. But under Waris Hussein's direction Colleen Dewhurst paints a surprisingly monotoned portrait of the psychologist, making the final moral lesson obvious early on.

A third new TV-movie, Marriage Is Alive and Well, written by Lee Kalcheim and directed by Russ Mayberry, is a witless collection of crass platitudes and old jokes mouthed by Joe Namath as a photographer evaluating three marriages and his own. Judd Hirsch, a good actor, shows no touch for comedy and Jack Albertson is reduced to a Groucho Marx bit in two sketches too dumb to describe.

Two other TV-films were unavailable for preview. Mother and Daughter: The Loving War, offers Tuesday Weld and Kathleen Beller in a 30-year relationship. Tuesday in middle-age? The Courage of Kavik has a sled dog journeying 2000 miles for a reunion with a lad who saved him.

For more romantic animal-oriented outdoorsy adventure, there's a repeat of 1975's The Adventures of the Wilderness Family, which provides dangerous delusions about wild animals and nature. For those with sophisticated taste, however, there's the repeat of 1977's Fun with Dick and Jane, with George Segal and Jane Fonda at their comedic best as the all-American upper-middle-class couple facing hard times. A pity the script switches midway from realistic social comedy to pure caper-plotting.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on days indicated.

THE FRONTIER SAGA CONTINUES

Debut: Robert Preston and Rosemary Harris reprise their roles as Hadley and Minerva Chisholm, the parents of a Virginia pioneer family making their way toward a new home in California during the 1840s.

Picking up the clan at Wyoming's Fort Laramie (where last season's miniseries left off), this series opener looks back on the two years of hardship, disease and bereavement the Chisholms have endured to get this far. But those trials are not over, as tonight young Will Chisholm (Ben Murphy) fights to save his dying wife, his brothers Bo and Gideon (James Van Patten, Brett Cullen) vie for the same girl, and Fort Laramie comes under siege by Indians.

REMOVE UNWANTED HAIR PERMANENTLY

You can now remove undesirable hair PERMANENTLY in the privacy of your own home. A simple electrolysis instrument called Perma Tweez enables everyone to enjoy the benefits of eliminating the bothersome chores of repeated shaving, depilatory use, waxings, forever. Well over one million people like yourself found Perma Tweez an effective end to hair on the face, legs and body.

Perma Tweez is so unique that a patent was granted because it is the only electrolysis instrument that won't puncture the skin. This feature has made it the choice of over 15,000 physicians as well as hospitals, government institutions and university medical centers. Easy instructions make you expert in a few minutes. You'll save hundreds of dollars on salon electrolysis by doing it yourself.

ART COLLEGE YEARS OLDER, YEARS WISER, $7,400 RICHER.

A lot of people who start college right after high school discover they're not ready for it.

That's a good reason to think about serving two years in the Army first. In the Army, you mature fast. You're given responsibility.

And you learn to appreciate the value of an education.

And now, you can also get extra benefits to help pay for your education.

If you join the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP), the money you save for school is matched two-for-one by the government (see table). Then, if you qualify, up to $2,000 is added to that.

That's why, in just two years in the Army, you could save as much as $7400 for college.

So you won't just be two years older when you start college. You'll also be two years wiser. And $7400 richer.

HOW VEAP WORKS

	Per Mo.	2 Yrs.	3 Yrs.	4 Yrs.
You save:	$75	$1800	$2700	$2700
Gov't. adds 2-for-1:	$150	$3600	$5400	$5400
Total:	$225	$5400	$8100	$8100
EducationBonus:		$2000	$4000	$6000
Total Benefits:		$7400	$12,100	$14,100*

ANNOUNCING . . . THE MOST INCREDIBLE DOCTOR-TESTED FORMULA TO HELP YOU --

KISS THE FAT GOOD-BYE

If your body's not what you want it to be — it's starting to fall behind . . . Take a minute — read this ad! Start on the road to health and happiness!

Trade your old body for a new one!

Now you can literally kiss unwanted fat and excess body fluids good-bye forever! Thanks to the most powerful reducing aid ever released for public use without a prescription, you can see the dramatic results every day in your mirror RIGHT BEFORE YOUR VERY EYES!

You can do it too!

These remarkable reducing tablets were discovered in Europe after many years of constant and painstaking research in the finest European laboratories. Now this famous fat burning formula is available to you. These Doctor-tested tablets will help your body to burn up the food you eat more quickly and convert it to ENERGY, not fat.

Lose up to 7 lbs. in just two days!

What will these wonderful reducing tablets do for you? They will help break down the fatty cells in your body. They will enable you to primarily lose weight from legs, thighs, rear, stomach, and sagging breasts. Forget what you have tried before. These Doctor-tested tablets really work. Many people have lost up to 6 or 7 lbs. in the first two days!

Ever wonder how famous personalities and members of the jet set stay trim and in shape while attending the many parties on their busy schedules? Ever wonder how some of Hollywood and TV's famous stars stay slim and youthful in appearance even though well up in age? These Doctor-tested reducing tablets were formerly available only to the very rich through their private physicians. These rich and famous people had to spend weeks in a private clinic where they were often charged as high as $300.00 a day. Now you can buy a 60-day supply for only $9.95.

Tighten — lift — shape your body!

You can see the pounds melt away every day right before your very eyes — you can see a newer, slimmer, more youthful you — you will hear the compliments of your friends and family as your body shapes and trims up. When used as directed with the correct eating plan, you'll not only lose weight but your body muscles will tighten, lifting and shaping your body to a newer, natural, more beautiful you.

Before starting on any weight loss program, we advise you to consult your Doctor to make sure you are in normal health and your only problem is being overweight.

JOAN ROBINSON: ONE WOMAN'S STORY
8 PM 15 E

Joan Robinson

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF A CANCER PATIENT

Special: In 1973, two years after learning she had ovarian cancer, 43-year-old Massachusetts writer Joan Robinson allowed a film crew to record her surgery, chemotherapy, convalescences and relapses in what turned out to be a losing two-year battle with the disease.

The resulting documentary (produced and directed by Mary Feldhaus-Weber) grimly yet compassionately chronicles Robinson's attempt to cope with her cancer—and come to grips with her mortality. The film also touches on related issues—including the sex life of a cancer victim, the question of candor between doctor and patient, and the use of heroin in terminal cases—all of which Joan and her husband Eric, a history professor, openly discuss.

Yet there are scenes difficult to watch. In one, an exhausted Eric tearfully wonders if his wife really loves him. In another (one of several sequences taped in black-and-white), Joan lies hospitalized, near death, and in agony no medicine can abate. (2 hrs., 30 min.)

For Family Reunions

NUTTY CARROT CAKE

1 cup PARKAY Margarine
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
2 cups shredded carrots
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons cinnamon
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped nuts
½ cup milk

Cream margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Blend in eggs, carrots and vanilla. Add combined dry ingredients alternately with milk, mixing well after each addition. Stir in nuts. Pour into greased 13 x 9-inch baking pan. Bake at 350°, 45 to 50 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool, frost with Vanilla Frosting. Garnish with additional chopped nuts, if desired.

Vanilla Frosting

3-oz. pkg. PHILADELPHIA BRAND Cream Cheese
1 tablespoon milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
3 cups sifted confectioners sugar

Combine softened cream cheese, milk and vanilla, mixing until well blended. Gradually add sugar, mixing until well blended and fluffy.

VEGETABLE PARM PIE

1½ cups cooked rice
1 egg
¾ cup KRAFT Grated Parmesan Cheese
¼ cup chopped onion
3 tablespoons PARKAY Margarine
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
10-oz. pkg. frozen carrot slices, cooked, drained
10-oz. pkg. frozen chopped broccoli, cooked, drained

Combine rice, egg, ¼ cup cheese and onion, mix well. Press onto bottom and sides of greased 9-inch pie plate. Make a white sauce with margarine, flour, milk and salt. Add remaining cheese; stir until well blended. Stir in vegetables, spoon into rice shell. Bake at 350°, 35 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Sprinkle with additional cheese if desired. 8 to 10 servings.

To Make Ahead: Cover unbaked casserole; refrigerate. When ready to serve, uncover. Bake at 350°, 45 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before serving.

ORANGE GLAZED PORK ROAST

4 to 5-lb. pork loin roast
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
18-oz. bottle KRAFT Barbecue Sauce
18-oz. jar KRAFT Orange Marmalade

Season meat with salt and pepper. Place meat, fat side up, on rack in baking pan. Insert meat thermometer in thickest part of meat not touching bone. Roast at 325°, 2½ to 3 hours or until meat thermometer registers 170°. Combine barbecue sauce and marmalade, simmer over low heat. Baste meat with sauce during last half hour. Serve with remaining sauce. 8 to 10 servings.

Cold feet?

New insulating insoles keep feet warm all winter...destroy foot odor

Now you can ward off winter chills by "insulating" your family's shoes and boots with ODOR-EATERS® FOOT-WARMERS™ insoles. New FOOT-WARMERS are thin, fleecy-soft insoles with a special insulating layer that blocks cold. FOOT-WARMERS keep feet warm outdoors, dry and comfortable indoors. And because heavy winter shoes can cause special foot odor problems, FOOT-WARMERS are loaded with activated charcoal to destroy odor and keep shoes fresh. This winter insulate with FOOT-WARMERS insoles. They'll keep your family's feet warm, dry and odor-free.

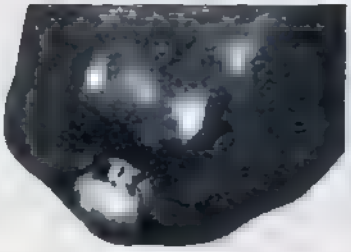
FREE Stark Bro's Catalog

Grow full-size apples, peaches, pears on Stark Bro's dwarf-size trees.



Dwarf trees reach only about 8- to 10-feet tall, yet bear full-size apples, peaches, pears, cherries and nectarines.

Season after season, you and your family will harvest tree-ripened crops of full-size fruit for eating fresh or for your favorite pies and desserts.

Dwarf trees take up so little space, even the smallest yard has room for several.

FREE CATALOG tells all about them--along with almost 400 varieties and assortments of other fruit trees, shade and nut trees, vegetable seeds, shrubs, vines, ornamentals, and award-winning roses.

ONCE UPON A FAMILY

In the acclaimed 1979 theatrical release "Kramer vs. Kramer," a troubled wife walks out on her self-absorbed husband and their young son, only to return months later to contend for custody of the boy. Strictly coincidentally, that's the basic story line of this sensitive 1980 TV-movie, a "GE Theater" presentation.

It begins with the departure of Janet Demerjian (Maureen Anderman), who anguishingly tells her husband Henry (Barry Bostwick) that she is "drowning in the life we're living." Stunned and shattered, Henry tries to put his life back in order, at first by relying on his mother (Nancy Marchand) to care for his two preteen kids. But when mom finally demurs, Henry buckles down to the task, turning—in a series of seriocomic vignettes—from a complacent parent to a loving father, who fights for his children in a climactic courtroom scene.

EDWARD & MRS. SIMPSON
7 30 PM ⑨ ⑪

PART 1: THE LITTLE PRINCE

Debut: A six-part dramatization of the century's best-known love story.

To the world, he was His Royal Highness, Edward, Prince of Wales, the boyish and charming heir apparent to the British throne. To his intimates, he was David, "the little prince," beset with public duties, overworked, and frustrated at times by his inability to do more for his subjects. In 1930, Edward (portrayed by Edward Fox) met Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson (Cynthia Harris), six years later, he would give up his scepter rather than live without her.

The events leading up to the abdication are chronicled in this series, produced by Britain's Thames Television and adapted from Frances Donaldson's biography "Edward VIII." The opener focuses on the Prince's love affairs with a succession of married women—and his deepening affection for the American-born Mrs. Simpson.

SUPER BOWL XIV

The trench warfare should decide it

Controlling the line of scrimmage—what mayhem it takes!—usually means winning the championship

By Mark Ribowsky

It won't be easy while your eyes are glued to the ball moving so poetically from one sleek gazelle to another, but when you watch Super Bowl XIV on Sunday, try to keep in mind the legacy of old Zipperhead.

Jerry Kramer was the man's given name, but after being sliced open and sewn up on so many operating tables it was rumored that Kramer could zip up any part of himself like a windbreaker. Kramer, the right guard of Vince Lombardi's Green Bay Packer dynasty entered Super Bowl I with a pin holding together his ankle, pieces of wood and buckshot in every crevice (the result of a hunting accident) and, after eight stomach operations, very little of his gut in use. One of those carvings was so serious that a teammate had a headstone made with Kramer's name on it, just in case. Old Zip didn't let it go to waste. He held a wake for himself.

"With the shape this body is in," he reasoned, "why wait?"

And yet Kramer could fool no one with lines like that. He was, in truth, as invincible as a man could be. He lived intimately with pain, agony and anatomical rearrangement—and liked it so much he kept coming back for more. Clearly, he was the kind of person the Super Bowl was made for.

They have been battles of wills, these Super Bowls, usually turning on which team is simply tougher. And it is in the trenches, in the war for the line, that we find out.

The foot soldiers fight for blood-bought inches, not for the long and glorious yards. But their private war of attrition directly translates into the game-deciding trends. If an offensive line keeps getting the edge, a team can carve out big chunks of yardage and not have to complete those third-down-and-27-miles-to-go plays. A dominating defensive line, of course, forces just the opposite to happen.

In the last 12 years, various linemen on opposite sides of the line have fought the war differently. For some, the opening whistle has liberated the juices of joyous primordiality, prompting them to come at each other, like frenzied rams, with a subtle kick in the groin. Others, getting fancy about it, use deception to fool each other. Still others have tried outright illegality. And yet it is a war that can be seen in microcosm in the individual confrontations between two very human beings. Which is perhaps why something delightfully simple can often decide the championship of the whole world.

In Super Bowl I, it may have been as simple as a Zipperhead one-liner in a goal-line situation. Before the game, the Kansas City Chiefs' left defensive end, Jerry Mays had said that Forrest Gregg—the Pack's All-Pro right offensive tackle—had always been his idol. "So they got down inside our five-yard line and we were digging in for this great stand, right?" Mays recalls. "It was a real tense moment for us. Hell, all those guys were our idols and we were nervous enough. Then they come to the line and—like it was a playground game—Kramer says to Gregg: 'OK, I'll take so-and-so; you take your idol over there,' pointing to me. They all laughed, but it got to me. And they took it in right over me."

The Oakland Raiders' big weapon against that Pack line of great old goats in Super Bowl II was 6'8", 280-pound Ben Davidson, who had gotten a national reputation after smashing Joe Namath's helmet—and jaw—in one shot. Big Ben was the perfect villain: an absurd walrus mustache, tequila by the case and motorcycle treks through the Mexican hills, where the residents knew him as El Gringo Grande. The Pack remembered him, as a former →

Green Bay draft pick, for walking around in the 20-below cold in his Bermuda shorts.

Tough as he was, though, old goat tackle Bob Skoronski buried him. "Ben had 12 tackles—all in the secondary," Skoronski says with relish. "He had a good charge but you could run at him—at all of 'em—and push him wide when he came in. But Ben was clean. He didn't poke me in the eye or kick me like I heard he would. I think he was afraid I'd pull his mustache off."

One confrontation people expected to turn Super Bowl III into a joke was between the Baltimore Colts' defensive tackle, 6'7", 300-pound Bubba Smith, and a 6'1" tackle named Dave Herman, a guard playing out of position because of injuries. Indeed, Smith—a man with a license plate reading "Kill, Bubba, Kill"—was more disturbed than usual before the game. "He said I'd snubbed him at Michigan State when I was a senior there and he was a freshman," Herman says. "Hell, I didn't even know who the guy was back then. How could I snub him?"

The matchup, and the game, did turn into a joke—because Herman turned Bubba inside out. "I'd watched films of him. I saw he needed time to unfold before coming in, because he was so damn big. So I just stuck my helmet in his chest before he could get all the way up. I took the offensive. It didn't hurt that my head's so big—I wore a size-8 helmet, a special-order job. Of course, Bubba had a lot to aim for, too. He used that head slap and I had to get the play twice coming to the line, because my head was ringing in the huddle. But I'm sure there's a big dent in Bubba's chest to this day."

The Packers and Jets didn't pollute the air with esoteric mumbo-jumbo—it was straight-ahead, breakneck football. But when Hank Stram brought his Chiefs back in Super Bowl IV, we got "moving pockets" and "stacked de- → fenses." And yet, says Mays, "It wasn't the alignments, it was the people we had: big, strong, mobile. And we had a new guy in the middle of the defensive line, Curley Culp, who took double-teaming pressure off everyone else on the line." In truth, the Chiefs were a basic, defensive-oriented team, and their victory was carved by the destruction by 6'7", 275-pound tackle Buck Buchanan upon the head of the Minnesota Vikings' 6'2", 240-pound center, Mick Tingelhoff.

"The stack was just an odd-man front—with a tackle playing head-up on the center so he can't fire out at the middle linebackers," Mays says. "They'd seen that before—but they never saw a 275-pound monster with speed like Buck. Poor Tingelhoff, he never got help. I could hear him groaning, 'Oh no, not again,' when Buck moved on top of him. Buck just said, 'Hello there again'."

The Big Three of the Vikings' defensive line: ends Carl Eller and Jim Marshall and tackle Alan Page, were terrors in the physically lighter NFL—all quick, hyperactive pass rushers. But the pituitary cases on the Chiefs' offensive line did them in, as would three future AFC lines. "They weren't too strong, weren't big, weren't tough," says Ed Budde, then the Chief guard. "We ran right down their throats, and we let them take themselves out of play."

Like Stram, Tom Landry, the computerized coach of the Dallas Cowboys, is big on mumbo-jumbo—the "Shotgun Offense," the "Flex Defense," etc. And yet the five Cowboy Super Bowl clubs have been your basic King Kong defensive teams. For while the Flex is a complex system for stopping the run, with certain linemen playing off the line a step to read the play, it only works when you have big studs.

Like Bob Lilly. Facing Lilly in Super Bowl VI was a young Miami Dolphin guard named Bob Kuechenberg. "On → the first play of the game," Kuechenberg recalls, "he beat me with that great inside move he had. I didn't even slow him down—or see him. And it was one of my better blocks that day."

But the Dolphins learned from losing. They beefed up their defensive line the following season, and improvised a variation on the odd-front: the "53 Defense" (three true defensive linemen and a fourth linebacker setting up on the line with them, from where he'd either rush the passer or drop back into pass coverage). Because Bob Matheson—whose number 53 gave the defense its name—was big enough to play on the line and fast enough to play linebacker, the Dolphin defense baffled every offensive line they faced, and went undefeated in '72. The main reason, however, was their smashing ground attack, led by a group of castoffs that may have been the most perfectly executing offensive line ever assembled.

The Dolphins' Super Bowl VII fodder was the elderly Washington Redskins, who tried a five-man defensive line to stop the Miami running game. All it did was give Kuechenberg and Company more bodies to knock down. Before the game, Redskin tackle Manny Sistrunk had said, "Ain't no man made of flesh and blood I can't take one-on-one." But Larry Little, the Dolphins' 265-pound human bowling ball of a guard, devoured Sistrunk. "I told him, 'It's OK, Manny. I'm not flesh and blood—I'm Frankenstein'."

The Pittsburgh Steelers' line strategy is much simpler. Everything their "Steel Curtain" defensive line does is calculated for mass mayhem. "Usually, a line of big pass rushers needs a guy to hang back at the line so it won't be burned by running plays in passing situations. Not us. We're totally reckless," says L.C. Greenwood, the mercurial 6'7", 250-pound left end. "When you penetrate like we do, you mess up the running game by knocking over blockers." The system worked to perfection in both Super Bowl IX against the Vikes and Super Bowl X against the Cowboys. Erasing the running game and forcing passing, they deflected five Fran Tarkenton passes in the first game and sacked Roger Staubach seven times in the second.

In the Viking game, the Curtain used another variation of the odd-man front, with two tackles—Mean Joe Greene and Ernie Holmes—on poor Tingelhoff's head. "We had those boys scared," Greenwood laughs. "Mean Joe was yelling, 'You pansies!' They were quivering all game." On one rush, Greenwood swept in and swatted a Tarkenton pass right back to Fran—who proceeded to throw it downfield. "I said, 'Hey, Fran, you can't do that.' He said, 't know it—but I'm still alive'."

Which is the same kind of small victory Denver Bronco quarterback Craig Morton could claim after the Cowboys got through with him in Super Bowl XII. The Cowboy front four—now with Lilly-clone Randy White at tackle next to Harvey Martin—ravaged the Bronco offensive line and plucked Morton like a Thanksgiving turkey. "Craig knew it before the game, too," Martin says. "I could see the fear in his eyes during the national anthem."

In last year's game, however, the Steelers' unsung offensive line snuffed the big rush of Martin and White, with left tackle Jon Kolb's work against Martin particularly impressive. Martin, though, has an alibi. "Randy and I were hurt, we were only about 70 per cent. Kolb? He's a good technician, but he was shaking during the game, sensing the worst if I wasn't hurt."

"Come to think of it," replies Kolb, "he didn't beat me in '76 either."

"I was hurting then, too," says Harvey.

Kolb's answer to that can't be printed, but a future Super Bowl may hinge on the settlement of the argument. It is sometimes that simple (END)

'Edward and Mrs. Simpson'

The woman who loved a king and rocked an empire had still another passion: watching 'What's My Line?'

By Bob Bach

[Edward and Mrs. Simpson, a syndicated series, begins Jan. 23 on many stations. See "Sports and Specials" for time and channel.—Ed.]

"I have found it impossible to . . . discharge my duties as King . . . without the help and support of the woman I love." Without the woman I love—probably the most quoted romantic statement of modern times. Women all over the world sighed over it.

And now here was that idealized woman, Wallis Warfield Simpson herself, Duchess of Windsor, sitting right next to me belting it out as if she were Ethel Merman: "I'm the fragrant Muriel, the mild cigar. . . . Why don't you pick me up and smoke me sometime?" When this lady, internationally famed for chic and elegance, segued right into an accurate imitation of the Skippy Peanut Butter commercial, I began to understand that I was seated alongside probably the most famous television junkie in the world.

My camaraderie with Wallis Simpson began one night in the early '60s at New York's El Morocco. I was at a table for two with Dorothy Kilgallen, on a Sunday night after What's My Line? I was associate producer of the show. One of the suave El Morocco captains approached us and announced—with just a touch of royal fanfare—that the Duchess of Windsor would enjoy having us join her party. Dorothy put on her rhinestone-decorated harlequin glasses and waved a cheery "Hello . . . . . OK." It was, after all, a sort of command performance. We joined her group.

Dorothy and I had barely ordered fresh drinks when our hostess announced her great addiction to the television tube, her particular fondness for What's My Line? and her special admiration for Dorothy's skill at game-playing. Obviously, the next thing we did was to invite the famous lady to come visit the show.

"The woman I love," the lady who changed the course of 20th-century history, came to CBS Studio 52 the very next Sunday. When I offered "Her Majesty"(?), "Her Royal Highness"(?), What-the-hell-do-you-call-her? the suggestion that she sit in the control room, she declined prettily, saying no thanks, she'd rather sit out front in the audience with the just plain folks. I could see that she was getting a kick out of being part of a live studio audience.

Again it was El Morocco after the show, only this time it was a foursome and we were having a little late supper in the inner sanctum known as The Champagne Room. The Duchess's companion was Woolworth playboy Jimmy Donahue. Things were on a more intimate level by now, and I think I had gotten around to the correct form of address: "Your Grace." It was shortly after the creamed chicken on toast that we got the complete repertoire of Muriel cigar and Skippy Peanut Butter jingles. The Duchess gave it her all—shoulder gestures, eye-rolling, the works. "We watch all the shows," she said, "the Duke and I." It was incredible, the thought of this man, once "By the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India," sitting up there in the Waldorf Towers watching Strike It Rich or The Big Payoff.

The Duchess was quick to become a TV insider: "You get the mystery guests for the show, do you?" she asked me. "Let me give you a few suggestions." At this point, displaying true show-biz know-how, she leaned over conspiratorially and whispered in my ear so that Dorothy wouldn't hear: "Have you tried to get Garbo?" I agreed it was a splendid idea but I didn't think the chances were bright. Unchastened by my bland reception of the first suggestion, the Duchess offered another. "How about Mrs. Woodrow Wilson?" she whispered. "She's a friend of mine and I'm sure I could get her for you." How do you say "I'll let you know" to an almost-Queen of England?

A few years later, Dorothy and her husband, Dick Kollmar, were in Paris and were invited out to the Windsors' country place for Sunday brunch. The Windsors sent their sizable car, royal flags flying from both fenders. There were Bloody Marys (announced as just plain Marys, the other word being taboo in such circles) and a lovely repast in the sun-drenched dining room. Then as the plates were being cleared away, the Duchess announced, "We'll now go out onto the terrace, where I have a little surprise for you, Dorothy." And out there on the spacious terrace overlooking the French countryside was a table with four chairs behind it, and, opposite it, a desk and chair, the emcee's position. "We're going to play What's My Line?" the Duchess announced gaily, and so they did, the other guests pressed into service as Arlene Francis, Bennett Cerf, John Daly, etc. The royal interest in game shows had persisted.

I saw the Windsors only once more, when they sat at an adjoining table in the restaurant L'Aiglon quite a few years later. They both looked tiny and withered and quite old. Martin Gabel, who was at our table, told the Duke an amusing little anecdote about their mutual interest, horse racing: it seems that years ago, when the Earl of Derby arrived in America, he had been asked by reporters, "Why is it, sir, that in your country people call it 'darby' while over here it is pronounced 'derby'?" The Earl replied, "We call the race 'darby' and what you call 'derby' we call a bowler. Quite simple, isn't it?" The Duke chuckled when Gabel told him this and then added, "The hat s also called a 'billycock'." That was entirely out of my realm, but I didn't quite have the nerve to ask Wally ("Your Grace") if she still remembered the words to the Muriel cigar jingle.

Rubbing 'Quincy' the right way

Robert Ito has a calming effect on the show and its star

By Bill O'Hallaren

Robert Ito, who is Sam Fujiyama on NBC's Quincy, walks onto the set for the first day of the new season's shooting and is greeted by a bellow from Jack Klugman. "Hey, folks, Bobby Ito, the Japanese saint. Has your canonization come down yet?"

Ito only smiles, which is definitely the wisest course because on Quincy, it's the star who makes the noise. Makes it from mornings through luncheon conferences and afternoons and evenings and far into the nights and all through the weekends.

"Jack," says Ito, "isn't the type to converse. He shouts. Some people will stand up at a table to dominate a meeting. Jack doesn't take any chances. He jumps on top of the table."

Ito also knows that on a normal day he is going to hear a good deal from the star on such subjects as his saintliness, Pearl Harbor, Japanese cars and what's really served in Japanese restaurants. He also knows that at some point Klugman will announce he is tired and Ito will begin massaging the Klugman neck. "Bobby's massages," says costar John S. Ragin (Dr. Asten) "have saved our lives. They've also saved the show."

Ito, a quiet, kindly, cheerful and supremely well-conditioned man, is, according to Klugman, "exactly what this show needs. Where there's a lot of tension, you need the temperament of a Bobby. I have a big mouth. He's so gracious. He never complains. He never asks for more. Let's face it, on some shows Sam doesn't get to say much more than 'Gee, Quince.' If he was really given something to do he would steal the whole series. But he's always wondering how he can help you. Sure, we kid him, but I love the man. I'd do anything for him."

Ito in turn is happy to have such warm relations with his volcanic star and happier still to be going into the fourth season of a successful series, and he's not about to fuss over the number of his lines or the frustrations in playing a character that is dangerously close to stereotype.

"The Quincy role is sort of a continuation for me. I had been playing Japanese medical technicians for five years. It got so I didn't even go to wardrobe. I had my own white coat." He understands why writers create Sam Fujiyamas. "Pathology labs in Los Angeles are full of people who look like me. There are so many Japanese who are scientifically minded but can't get into medical schools, so they become technicians, pharmacists and the like." He adds, "They are also damned good at what they do."

Ito's own life story has considerably more twists and turns than most of the scripts he has done—and is far more improbable. He was born in Vancouver, Canada, to a family that was part of a little Japanese community of truck farmers and fishermen. Quiet, shy people.

To the amazement and delight of his parents, little Bobby turned out to be a singer, tap dancer, actor and mimic. He appeared on kiddy shows on Vancouver radio, at church socials, amateur hours and any stage where a little Japanese kid could perform.

No one in the family had ever done anything like that before and when he was 10 his parents decided they would give up everything and take Bobby to Hollywood. His dance teacher told them he might even get on Major Edward Bowes' "Amateur Hour," which could lead to all sorts of triumphs. Then came Pearl Harbor.

Instead of going to Hollywood, the Itos and the other Japanese were rounded up by the Canadian government and interned. "They put my dad in a road gang. The rest of the family was taken to a relocation camp at a race track." The family was never to live in Vancouver again.

Ito is still bitter. "We [the Japanese] had taken over truck farming and fishing because we would work 17 or 18 hours a day, more than anyone else. It was a good time to boot us out. We had the best land, the delta land, and we monopolized the fishing. We lost everything. (Klugman says, "Every time I hear about it I get angrier than Bobby.")

"After the war the government wanted the Japanese dispersed and we were sent to Montreal." His father, who eventually rejoined the family in the relocation camp, worked as a mechanic and they lived in a slum apartment in the red-light district.

"My father didn't understand what kind of neighborhood it was and I'm not sure about my mother, but I was a streetwise kid. The girls would be sitting in the windows and they began talking to me and sending me on errands. It was a tough area. The kids who lived next to us spent their days stealing. Their mother was their fence."

Ito kept doggedly turning up at every available amateur talent show, mostly as a singer, but when his voice changed he plunged full time into dancing and brashly tried out for the National Ballet of Canada in Toronto. At 19 he was accepted, and spent the next nine years with the National Ballet. "I was what they call a character dancer, which involves a certain amount of acting." He also appeared as a dancer on the Robert Goulet and Wayne and Shuster TV variety shows "and any time they needed an Oriental actor on TV in New York I usually got the part."

He played Wang Ta in "Flower Drum Song" with a touring company. Hollywood agent Bessie Loo saw the show in Las Vegas and asked him why he → didn't take a stab at Hollywood. He said that was his intention way back in 1941 but a funny thing happened. . . .

That was 1965 and he's been working ever since, though sometimes the intervals between jobs were painfully long. "I'd be down to my last five bucks and I'd call Bessie and there'd always be somebody who owed her a favor and I'd get to eat again."

Ito is old-fashioned enough to boast that wife Lucy, whom he met in Toronto, "has never had to work a single day since we were married." Lucy likes it that way. "She always felt she should be home for the kids." Daughter Jennifer is 19, Thomas is 16. Would Jenny be satisfied staying home, once married? Ito smiles, "No, I don't think so."

The Quincy role was clearly the break of his life, but he came within a few seconds of losing it. "A good friend of mine had read for Jack and Glen Larson and Lou Shaw [the co-creators]. Jack said, 'He's just fine,' and left. My appointment was at 5:30 and when I came in, Larson was the only one left and he was walking out the door. He handed me a sheet of paper and said 'Read this.' I started to study it and he said, 'There's no time, just read it.' I did and he thanked me and walked out."

Ito was surprised to learn a few days later that he had won the part. Larson had liked his manner. The friend who came so close still works regularly. "He gets all the parts I used to get."

Ito admits the Sam character was "nowhere when the series started." He credits Klugman with developing Sam: "All my scenes are with Jack, and any time they try to give me caricature lines he throws them out." Peter Thompson, who produced Quincy for three years, believes Ito is too modest. "He gives Sam a wonderful, laid-back quality." He describes Ito as "a peaceful man, with enormous discipline." He believes women especially sense this "and an incredible amount of his fan mail is from women who want to marry him."

John Ragin believes there are problems in playing a Japanese role that aren't apparent to many. "There's lots of pressure on a Japanese actor to behave a certain way. There are Japanese groups that monitor the image. I think Bobby works under some restraints we don't really understand."

Ito has few illusions about his future. "I'll always play Orientals and there's always a tendency to write Orientals as stereotypes." But Peter Thompson says, "If any Oriental ever breaks out of the genre, it wil be Bobby." Ito often works with young Orientals who wonder whether there's any future for them in acting. "I always tell them it will be tough, the roles are limited and they'll need a lot of luck. But if they're willing to work hard enough . . ."

At 48, Ito still takes singing and dancing lessons and follows an intensive physical fitness routine. He and Lucy are also advanced students of aikido, described as a nonaggressive martial art. He guesses that devotion to study may be ingrained in Oriental actors. "Keye Luke, who is 75, still takes acting lessons and wouldn't think of stopping."

Ito has never been to Japan and has only a middling knowledge of his parents' language. "I speak French better." In 1974 he went to Hong Kong to do a kung fu movie and says, "It was the first time I had ever been in a city where everybody looked like me—wall-to-wall Orientals. For once I didn't feel everyone was staring at me."

His mother is gone, but Ito's 82-year-old father, who lives in Toronto, is an occasional proud visitor to Hollywood and the Quincy set. "Dad always talks about what might have happened if they had brought me to Hollywood in 1941. Maybe I'd have been a child star. I always say, 'I don't know about that, but at least we might have gone to a better relocation camp!' " END

BOB HOPE's six-hour retrospective of more than 30 years entertaining at military bases and hospitals in the United States and overseas will be telecast Feb. 3 and 10 on NBC. "It begins back in 1941 when I started the shows on radio at March Field in California," Hope told us recently. The special has film clips depicting some of Hollywood's major stars. "We've got a list you won't believe," Hope said. "JIMMY CAGNEY, BILL HOLDEN, GINGER ROGERS, JIMMY STEWART, DICK POWELL, LANA TURNER, CAROLE LOMBARD, STEVE McQUEEN, ANN-MARGRET. Some of the film has never been seen before." Recalling his visits to service personnel, Hope said, "We saw CLARK GABLE at a B-17 bomber base in northern England. We were standing there waiting for him to crawl out of a plane. He was shaking. Gable was a gunner on those B-17s and he said, 'This is not for me, this crap.' He'd just come back from Germany where the flack was really hitting those planes."

LONI ANDERSON, the blonde receptionist on WKRP in Cincinnati, plays one of Hollywood's legendary glamour girls in CBS's movie "Jayne Mansfield--A Symbol of the '50s." Producer TOM KUHN said the film will present "the two sides of Jayne. And there were two. One was the typical dumb blonde. It was an invention, and it was her invention. The other side was a down-to-earth, lovely, sweet woman who started believing her self-generated publicity and started to live the role. It's the story of a woman who was more of a publicity star than a movie star. Everybody knows her name but if you asked somebody to name one Jayne Mansfield picture, they'd have trouble" . . . Filmation Studios presently has its artists working on an animated Marx Brothers special . . . British actor ROBIN ELLIS, known in this country for his PBS appearances in Poldark and "She Loves Me," joins the cast of NBC's film "The Curse of King Tut's Tomb," replacing IAN McSHANE, who was injured. HARRY ANDREWS, WENDY HILLER, ANGHARAD REES, EVA MARIE SAINT and RAYMOND BURR complete the cast.

Docudrama producer STANLEY KALLIS is making a three-hour NBC-TV film version of "Enola Gay," based on the book about the atomic-bomb attack on Japan. Kallis, who produced "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," said "Enola Gay" deals with "the mission to train and deliver the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima. Behind it are all of the moral aches, pains and agonies of America's decision in 1945 to drop that bomb."

YOUNG MAVERICK

"Siddown and play poker or we'll break both your legs," growl a pair of tough hombres. Ben Maverick smiles painfully, sits down and plays poker.

If that doesn't take you back 20 years or so, you are too young to remember Maverick, one of television's all-time hit Westerns. Maybe you don't even remember black-and-white television, poor kid. But your elders are liable to remember the old series, starring James Garner as Bret Maverick, as better than it was. Garner starred in only half the early episodes (Jack Kelly, as brother Bart, alternated in the lead). Garner left the show in 1960 and it went on for two years without him.

CBS's new version, Young Maverick, introduces yet another relative, Ben (Charles Frank), who, like his forebears, wears ruffled shirts, drifts around in amiable pursuit of the fast buck, and sedulously avoids violence upon his person. Charles is not as funny as Garner, but he is funnier than Kelly and better-looking than either. The new show has much of the loose charm of the old one, and the plots are no worse.

Young Ben has a girl friend, or kissing buddy, named Nell (Susan Blanchard, who has a pert, avid face and some comedy talent) and is followed around the Old West by a rock-jawed U.S. marshal (John Dehner, who acts mainly with his eyebrows). Nell bankrolls Ben's schemes and forlornly yearns for him, but is left looking at the south end of his northbound horse as he heads for the next town.

In the premiere, Nell's cousin Clancy, a good-hearted moose with mighty fists, inspired Ben and Nell to try the fight-promotion business, wagering the behemoth Clancy against a barnstorming boxer. It developed that Clancy could fight only when he was mad. Meanwhile a pair of brutish saloonkeepers threatened to commit battery on Ben over a gambling debt. There were several good brawls and some passable jokes, and the hour went by painlessly.

In other stories, young Maverick has run afoul of a gentlemanly gunfighter who took a shine to Nell and decided our hero was caddish to her and needed shooting, and a hanging judge who wanted him to star on the six o'clock noose. When his schemes (like selling a poker-playing horse) misfire, Ben relies on his glib tongue, or in extreme circumstances, the derringer he keeps up his sleeve. Charles carries all this off in jaunty style; if the series lacks real excitement, well, we've been here before.

Still, television copying itself is no worse than copying old movies. There may be a raft of old-series ideas worth reviving. On Broadway, where there's also an idea lull, producers are bringing back "My Fair Lady" and "West Side Story." So why shouldn't television try Son of Dr. Kildare and Leave It to Beaver's Grandchildren? A thoughtful remake of Star Trek could be superior to any science fiction series of the past 10 years.

There is widespread nostalgia for old television shows, maybe because we associate them with happier times. Anyway, a good old idea is better than a bad new one, any old day. END
